

What we do

✦ What to expect from your family solicitor

✦ What does my family solicitor do?

Our work with you depends upon your circumstances and what you hope to achieve. Everyone's family situation is different and this means that, whilst the background legal framework is the same, how we approach helping you navigate your particular circumstances needs to be tailored to you.

Where there is a dispute, we start from the basis that it is preferable to resolve matters amicably and without the intervention of the court. In some situations, however, it may be necessary for an application to the court to be made sometimes urgently. We can advise you about your options.

✦ Our role

- Meet with you either in person or remotely and advise you upon the law relating to your circumstances, present you with options and possible outcomes.
- Manage your case by liaising with you and other parties, for example your ex-partner or other professionals such as their solicitor on your behalf.
- Engage with other third-party professionals such as independent financial advisors, pension experts, counsellors, accountants, surveyors, medical professionals where their involvement is required and with your agreement.
- Represent you at certain hearings before the court or instruct a barrister for advice and/or representation at hearings where appropriate.
- Draft legal documents on your behalf and prepare and send correspondence to you and third parties.
- Endeavour to support you in achieving the best possible legal outcome.

Please don't hesitate to get in touch for advice.
